

PROCESS

In an age of rapid change, and rapidly evolving technologies, it seems that change itself is an entirely expected phenomenon.

But if cities exist to enable exchange — for the wealth of its citizens — what part does change play in this exchange, and what part do citizens play in it?

Moreover, what part do citizens play in how cities are made and re-made?

Do citizens merely attempt to 'keep-up' with change, or can they be drivers of this?

And who are the city's citizens, anyway? And how ought they be a part of a dialogue that in itself helps shape the change we need; change that will enable appropriate forms of urban exchange and meaning?

Three Melbourne-based designers will address these issues through their different lens and work.

Speakers...

ANDREW FEENEY - urban designer

RORY HYDE - Rory Hyde Projects

JILL GARNER - Associate Victorian Government Architect

VYAG - VICTORIAN YOUNG ARCHITECTS AND GRADUATES PRESENTS PROCESS

6:30pm MON 6TH MAY '13 @ LOOP

MYERS PLACE MELBOURNE
WWW.ARCHIPROCESS.ORG